Policy Enterprise Discount AND Term Exceptions

Policy article packet containing the exact enterprise discount and contract-term rules governing line-item removals and exception routing.

Details

Policy article 'Enterprise Discount Matrix' states bundle discounts are evaluated on the final approved product mix, not prior revisions.
The discount policy states removal of an analytics module can invalidate a higher bundle discount tier if required attached products are no longer present.
The term policy states a 36-month term may remain unchanged after a line-item removal if the remaining subscription structure is otherwise valid.
The exception policy states if a repriced quote exceeds the standard discount threshold for the new product mix, approval must be escalated rather than auto-approved.
The packet includes a policy article or section specifying onboarding services are not counted as a qualifying analytics attachment for bundle-tier eligibility.
The packet includes an exception routing instruction identifying escalation to deal desk / pricing authority for nonstandard discount retention after composition changes.
The policy packet is current and effective for the date of review.

Additional Information

article 1 titled 'Enterprise Discount Matrix' stating that discount eligibility is determined by the final approved product mix, and that removal of a qualifying analytics module may drop the quote from a higher bundle discount tier explicit language that onboarding/professional services do not count as qualifying analytics attachments for bundle discount eligibility article 2 titled 'Contract Term Handling for Revised Quotes' stating that line-item removals do not by themselves require a term change; a 36-month term can remain if the resulting quote is otherwise compliant article 3 titled 'Exception Approval Routing' stating that if the retained discount on the revised mix exceeds the standard threshold, the quote be escalated to pricing/deal desk rather than directly approved
